

Here Come The Huskers!

Lincoln, NE. — Look out Big Eight Conference; here come the Cornhuskers.

Colorado learned that the hard way last Saturday, much to the delight of 76,168 fans in sun-bathed Memorial Stadium, by falling to Nebraska 59-0 in the conference opener for both teams.

Under the direction of sophomore quarterback Turner Gill, Nebraska shattered Colorado's defense for 719 yards of total offense and an NCAA record 42 first downs. Gill, who was making his first varsity collegiate start, passed for four touchdowns to tie an NU school record shared by Vince Ferragamo and David Humm.

Behind a charged-up offensive line, Gill mixed in hand-offs to I-backs Mike Rozier and Roger Craig and fullback Phil Bates with 176 yards passing to put the game away early.

Rozier, Bates, and split end Todd Brown each scored two touchdowns, while Craig was the game's leading rusher with 96 yards in 11 carries. Rozier, starting for the first time as a Cornhusker, gained 95 yards in 11 carries.

The Cornhusker offense was awesome and so was the Black Shirt defense, which spent most of the second half on the bench after initiating what would become Nebraska's first shutout of Colorado in 76 years.

Locker-room Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "I'm surprised. I really thought this would be a four-quarter ball game. I thought we would probably win it, but I thought it might be seven or 10 points, maybe 14, and if we didn't play well, we'd get beat. In the fourth quarter, I was trying to do anything that wouldn't score. We were going to execute our offense, but it was hard to call a play that wouldn't gain five yards. Turner (Gill) had a great day. I'm very proud of the way he played."

Charlie McBride, defensive line coach — "This is something we needed bad. I mean, real bad. I think this will be the start of something real good. I think we can be one heckuva football team. Maybe we didn't believe in ourselves enough. Now, we will. The biggest thing about this game was the offense and the defense coming together as one football team."

Turner Gill, quarterback — "I couldn't have imagined this. I don't think I could do any better than I did today. I have confidence that I can throw the football. It might look like I'm more of a runner, but it doesn't make any difference to me whether I run or pass. I'm not strictly a running quarterback. One of the reasons I came to Nebraska was that the quarterbacks here run the option and throw the football."

Todd Brown, split end — "It's hard when you have a bunch of athletes who know what they can do. It's frustrating when you show it every day in practice, then don't show it in a game. This is the emotional breakthrough we needed. Today proved to everybody that we can pass the ball as well as run it."

Jeff Krejci, safety — "I knew we could be good, but I didn't really know how good. Today reminded me of some Nebraska teams of the past. The offense was blowing out the other team, and the defense was playing three downs, then leaving. For the first time this season, we put it together on both sides of the ball for the whole game. It gave us a lot of confidence and a lot of momentum, especially for the first game in the Big Eight."

The Buffaloes

Chuck Fairbanks, head coach — "I'm extremely disappointed for our players. I think everybody who suffers through this type of embarrassment, as either a player or a coach, has got a good chance to check his hole card pretty well. It's not any fun for these young people to have to go through that. Nebraska dominated the game in every area of play. They're a fine football team. We just had more football team than we could handle by any stretch of the imagination."

Randy Essington, quarterback — "Nebraska was a lot better than I expected. I couldn't believe how well they played defense. We were prepared for their cornerback blitzes, but their inside linebackers came in so quick we couldn't pick it up all the time. Actually, I had time to throw most of the time, but every route seemed like it was 50 yards long, and I still overthrew everybody."

Sandy Armstrong, noseguard — "If they have a quarterback that's better than (Turner) Gill who was starting before, I don't think anyone could beat them. He's definitely a good quarterback. They've got a much better offensive football team than UCLA. Nebraska was a lot better than we thought, and much, much better than any team we've played this year."

Willie Beebe, fullback — "You can't get momentum if you don't score, and Nebraska stopped our offensive flow all day."

Injury Report

Nebraska came through its Big Eight Conference opener without incurring any significant injuries. Linebacker Brent Evans received a bump on the knee, reserve middle guard Ken Graeber sprained an ankle, and starting tight end Jamie Williams didn't play in the second half because of a touch of the flu.

But none of the Cornhuskers regulars are expected to be missing when Nebraska plays Kansas State in Manhattan, Kansas, this weekend.

Linebacker Steve McWhirter, who has been sidelined with a knee injury since early in the season-opener at Iowa, also may be able to play in the Kansas State game.

The Way We See It...

Nebraska vs Kansas State

Steve Physiac

play-by-play voice, Kansas State Football Network

"Last year, Roger Craig was the best third-team I-back in the country. This year, his high-leg kick may make him the best I-back in the country. I've seen films of Mike Rozier and he's something, too. Then, there's Turner Gill ...holy smoke, he's the future. K-State has a bunch of hungry, young kids, but they're 18 and 19-year-olds battling mostly 22 and 23-year-olds. With that in mind, I'll say Nebraska 42, K-State 14. Kansas State played 16 freshmen at Missouri. Mizzou scored 30 points by way of mistakes. That's the problem with youth."

Jeff Kinney

color commentator, Nebraska's syndicated television football playbacks

"I have to believe this game will be something similar to Colorado. For the first time, the players felt like they played well together. When a team gets that feeling, it starts to tell and if it continues to tell, we're looking at a great Nebraska football team. Everyone believes everything is starting to click. That intangible is a big step in the right direction. Nebraska 56, Kansas State 7."

Ron Paradis

sports director, WIBW-TV, Topeka

"I don't think you'll see this game on the line in Las Vegas. If Nebraska can score 59 on Colorado and Missouri can score 58 on Kansas State, it looks like a game where Nebraska can almost pick the numbers. It's interesting. Spirit-wise and technique-wise, Kansas State has been known to play the socks off Nebraska and Oklahoma, yet against the lesser lights, the effort hasn't always been there. This year, though, I don't even see a chance for respectability. I'll have to say Nebraska 60, Kansas State 0."

Chuck Sinclair

Lincoln Journal and Star

"When Jim Dickey went with the redshirt idea, he took this season with him, especially against teams like Missouri and Nebraska. Against the powers, you have to have your best players on the field to even hope to compete. Nebraska's new balanced offensive attack will be tough for Oklahoma and Missouri to stop, let alone a team diluted like K-State. I'll say Nebraska 42, Kansas State 0, and that might be conservative."

Kent Pavelka

KFAB, Omaha

"In my opinion, what we saw against Colorado is an indication of the way this Nebraska team can play. I have the feeling that the Huskers could win the rest of their games. If K-State isn't the worst team in the conference, it's at least equipped to compete against the best teams because of the red-shirt situation. When Jim Dickey redshirted his best players, I think he threw the season away. Nebraska 55, Kansas State 6."

The Huskers Say...

Huskers Illustrated

"Now that Nebraska has unwrapped its full package of dynamite, Iowa and Penn State must feel fortunate to have NU behind them. The Hawkeyes and Mitty Lions wouldn't likely beat the Huskers again. Nebraska now has the momentum to match its talent and the No. 1 motive is still a Big Eight championship. Nebraska 45, Kansas State 3."

Pete Goering

Topeka Capital-Journal

"I'm going to predict Nebraska 55, Kansas State 7, mainly because Nebraska can only bring 55 players. Obviously, that makes the game an even bigger mismatch. K-State will be using between 15 and 20 freshmen against a team that, despite two losses, still has to be one of the best in the country. You just can't play that many young kids against a good team and expect to win."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne admitted he was a little concerned about the ease with which his Cornhuskers disposed of Colorado in their Big Eight Conference opener last Saturday.

"I suppose this is the first week I've had any concern about over-confidence," Osborne said as he began preparing his team for this Saturday's game with Kansas State in Manhattan.

Kansas State might not seem to be a cause for worry. The Wildcats have lost four straight games after opening with a 31-10 victory over South Dakota, and they'll be coming off a 58-13 loss to Missouri in their Big Eight opener.

But Osborne is trying to keep his players' emotions on an even keel after their 59-0 destruction of Colorado. After a game like that, in which everything worked, there's "always a danger of what you tell your players going in one ear and out the other, but if anything, we needed a shot of confidence," said Osborne.

The victory over Colorado provided that emotional boost. "The offensive line was aggressive, the backs ran hard and we threw the ball better than we have all year," he said.

Even so, the Cornhuskers weren't flawless. Films of the game showed that they were occasionally guilty of small mistakes, "blocking with the wrong shoulder, stepping with the wrong foot, things like that," Osborne said, adding that he hopes his team will realize it must continue to improve and "keep striving for perfection."

Nebraska's offense overwhelmed Colorado, however, "the thing I was most pleased with was the way our defense played," he said.

The Nebraska Black Shirts were without injured players Toby Williams and Steve McWhirter, who has been sidelined since early in the Iowa game with a knee injury. McWhirter, a junior from Fairfield, Iowa, suited up for the Colorado game, however, and is expected to be back playing against Kansas State.

According to Osborne, the defense has been more of a concern than the offense, which began to put things together after the season-opener at Iowa. For instance, "we played awfully hard in the Auburn game but we just didn't get much done scoring-wise because of a couple of penalties and some mistakes. Really, we've played pretty good offense since the Iowa game."

The yardage mounted against Colorado, in part, because of the Buffalo defense. "I thought they'd be better than they were," he said.

Against the Buffaloes, Nebraska's offense showed a running-passing balance which had been missing in all but the Penn State game this season. Sophomore quarterback Turner Gill passed for 178 yards and a school-record tying four touchdowns, and the Cornhusker backs rushed for 541 yards.

Sophomore junior college transfer Mike Rozier made his first start at Nebraska and responded by gaining 95 yards in 11 carries, a yard less than junior Roger Craig picked up in the same number of tries. "It's great to have those players. You really need two I-backs when you play in the Big Eight," Osborne said, adding that he still hopes to be able to redshirt sophomore Jeff Smith.

Smith, who was a high school All-American in Wichita, Kan., likely won't be on the travel roster for Kansas State. Kansas State was among the schools on the list from which he made his final college choice.

Osborne indicated that Rozier, who played one season at Coffeyville, Kan., Junior College, might start against Kansas State, but "I really don't know," he said.

The performances of the two I-backs were so similar — their carries were the same, their yardage was the same, and "they both had one fumble and recovered it," said Osborne — that Craig might start this week, and if things remain equal, Craig and Rozier could be alternated as starters throughout the remainder of the season. Between them, they've already rushed for 922 yards this fall, and they've combined to average more than six yards per carry.

According to Osborne, Nebraska should be able to prepare for Kansas State with the same determination it would have if the opponent were Missouri or Oklahoma. "The emphasis we try to keep is for the players to play as well as they can every week," he said.

If the Cornhuskers know they've played as hard as they can play, they'll "avoid total discouragement, even if they get beat," said Osborne.

If they play the way they played against Colorado last Saturday, they aren't likely to be confronted with that problem.

The New Season

After losses to Iowa and Penn State in its first three games, Nebraska looked like anything but a contender for national and Big Eight honors.

But just how much of a difference has that tough opening schedule made for the Cornhuskers as they enter the "new season?"

If Nebraska had been playing an easier schedule, would it have been too late to go to a Turner Gill when the tough end of the Big Eight schedule arrived? Probably. That is merely one example. The losses, of course, were hard to take. But they showed specifically what had to be done to develop this Husker team into a Big Eight champion. And, as evidenced by the NU-of-old performance against Colorado last week, the Huskers have arrived.

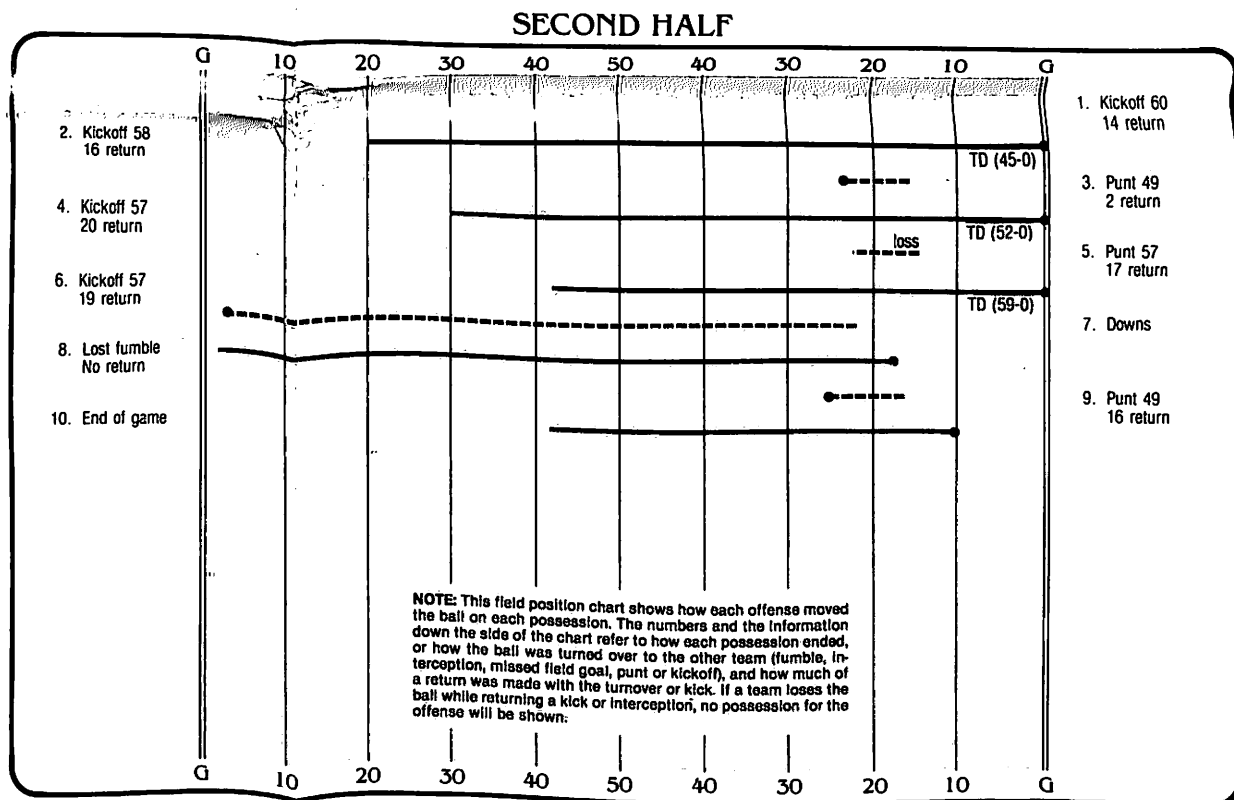

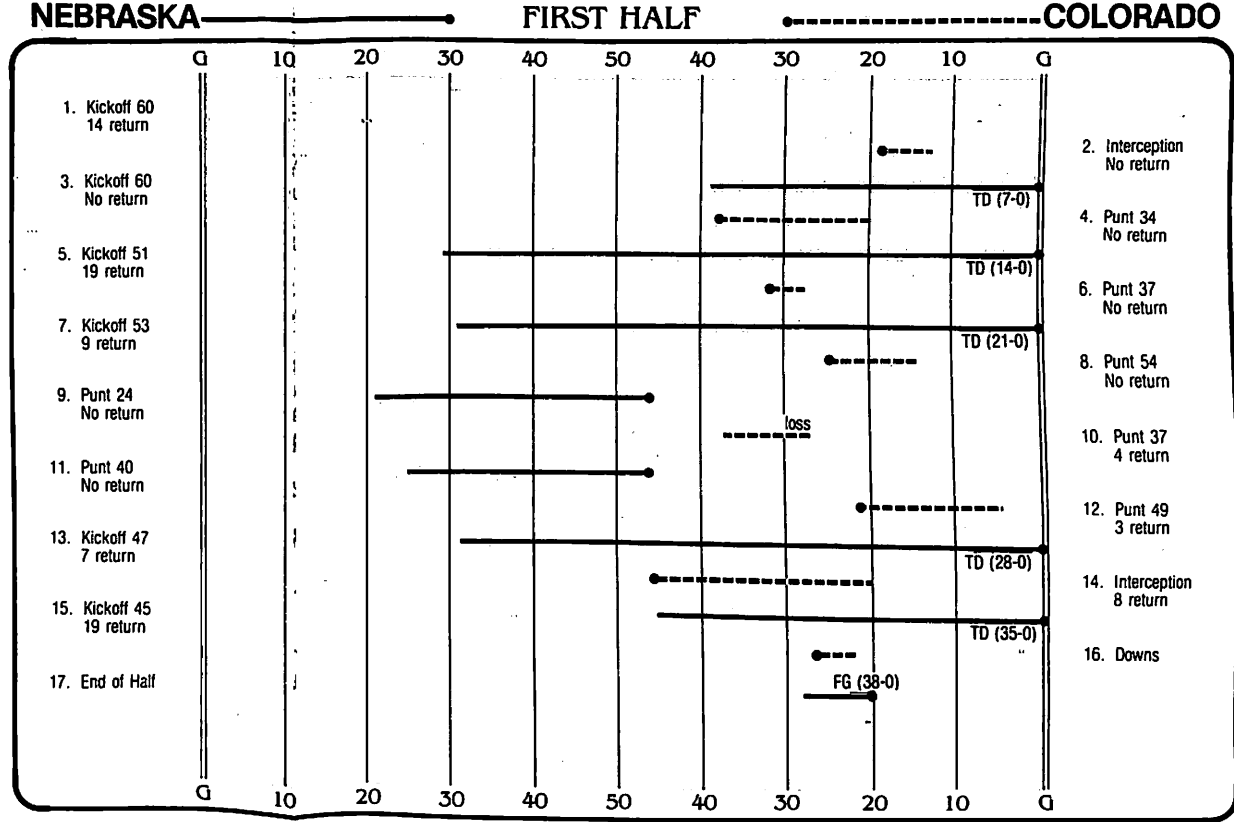

Coach Tom Osborne's squad has labored under the most trying of circumstances against some of the nation's top teams. Florida State, in the start of a nationally proclaimed suicide schedule, fell to Nebraska by a landslide in the second half. Then the Seminoles went on to knock over Ohio State and Notre Dame on back-to-back weeks. That should say something about the comparative strengths of these top national programs!

This is a new season. The testing and correcting have been done to prepare for the final exams. The Big Eight. And it is a new-look Big Eight in a strange sort of way. Pre-season favorite Oklahoma has won only one of four games and has shown a softness in the secondary for any kind of a passing attack. With Gill, Nebraska has the passing it was searching for earlier. Missouri is unbeaten despite nearly a complete rebuilding year. The Tigers will play a big road game at Ames, Ia., this week, where the Cyclones are smarting from an embarrassing loss at San Diego State just a week after tying OU. Oklahoma State is among the nation's leaders in defense and tied with NU and Missouri for the league lead.

Get set! The excitement's just beginning!!
